An Italian man was jailed in Marrakesh, Morocco, in mid-January on charges of homosexuality and taking and possessing pornographic images, the Assahra Al Maghribiya newspaper reported.

The man, identified only as "Gian Paolo," will be deported when he has served his sentence, the report said.

The newspaper said he confessed that he headed a network of Moroccan and foreign homosexuals and shared photos of "abnormal sexual situations" on the Internet, according to a translation provided by the International Gay and Lesbian Human Rights Commission.
